PRFU Teams organize a Study Day on :

Gender, Language and Identity in (Post) Colonial Algeria

Wednesday, March 13th 2019

(At the 30 Laboratories Building)

This Study Day is hosted by LLC research laboratory – Tlemcen University, within the framework of the PRFU “Gender, Language and Identity in (Post) Colonial Algeria” and in collaboration with the PRFU “L2 between Traditional French and English: an Anthropological Study of Languages at the University of Tlemcen”. It aims at exploring the issues of gender, discourse and identity in the (Post) Colonial context in comparison to other African countries, since they all share a common history of colonisation, struggle, independence, language situation, and of course the post-independence period. It endeavours to examine the intertwined aspects of gender, race, class, religion, culture, art, and space to highlight similarities and differences between various cultures and societies in African contexts.

Proposals may include but are not limited to:

- (Post) Colonial Literature
- (Post) Colonial Discourse
- Gender and Identity
- Language Situation
- Anthropological Study

Abstracts of 250 words for 15 minute presentations should be submitted by 28th February 2019 to the following email :

llc.eng2018@gmail.com

Proposals should include a title, your name(s), contact details, and institution affiliation(s).
